Education

Ph.D. Psychology (Cognitive)

Rutgers University, May 2014

Thesis Resolving wh-quantifier ambiguities: Integrating theoretical and experimental perspectives.

Advisors: Julien Musolino & Viviane Déprez

Committee members: Kristen Syrett (Rutgers University), John Trueswell (University of Pennsylvania)

M.Sc. Psychology (Cognitive)

Rutgers University, 2011

B.A. English language and literature

Perm State University, Russia, 2007

Certificates

Certificate program “Leadership in Academia, Industry, and Society” University of Tübingen, 2022

Certificate in Cognitive Science

Rutgers University, 2013

Certificate in Language Learning and Teaching

Rutgers University, 2012

Research interests

Computational modeling of pragmatic reasoning, ambiguity resolution, quantifier scope, experimental linguistics, atypical language development, first and second language acquisition

Work experience

Postdoctoral fellow

September 2018 - present

University of Tübingen

- Neuro-Cognitive Modeling Group
- Research Training Group “Ambiguity: Production and Perception”

Visiting scholar

2016 - 2018

Wayne State University, Detroit

- Department of Linguistics

Lecturer, part-time

2015 - 2016

University of Leipzig

- Institute of Linguistics

Teaching assistant

2009 - 2013

Rutgers University

- Department of Psychology

Russian language instructor

2008 - 2009

Rutgers University

- Department of German, Russian, and East European Languages and Literatures
